

My brother, my mom and I were sitting on the couch. We were watching a movie, while my dad was fixing something (I do not remember exactly). My brother stood up when in that exact same moment, the whole couch started to shake. For a quick second I thought that it was shaking because my brother pushed it so hard, but we realized that the cause was an actual earthquake! It was a very weird feeling. When we were just up to going outside, an earthquake stopped. It did not last long. Later in that day, we heard on the news that the epicentre of an earthquake was in small town near Zagreb, called Petrinja.
